Dedication

This research is dedicated to my aunt Rosario de Fatima, a strong woman, an inspiration and an example for all Angolan women of loyalty, friendship, professionalism, family values and so much more. You will forever live in my memory and in my heart.

Acknowledgements

This dissertation would not be possible without all of the women that agreed to open their hearts and have very personal and intimate conversations with me. I must also acknowledge all the women that, after casual conversations with me about very private matters in their lives, agreed that those conversations could be used to enhance my research.

I thank my husband Daniel for enduring hours of absence and for his invaluable input through this lengthy process. I thank my children, Gabriel and Rafael, for knowing when they needed to be quiet and for their moral support. I thank my family, especially my mother, for their support and for reminding me to keep going. I thank my friends for believing in me.

Thanks to my tireless supervisor Dan Wulff for his infinite patience and expertise in helping me through this long adventure. Thanks as well to my friend and often colleague Gabriela Cohen for her suggestions and criticisms – it all made me want to do better.

My gratitude also to the Taos Institute for giving me this opportunity, especially to Sheila McNamee for believing that I could do it and helping me believe it too.
