

Brief Encounter with the Taos Institute

November 2022

Welcome to our 2022 virtual Gathering - Unfolding Dialogues: Relational Resources for Global Good

From Ken Gergen, Taos Institute President

Beginning November 12 and continuing through November 18, the Taos Institute is Gathering online to engage with our global community in an enormously rich week of on-line offerings. As part of this virtual Gathering - Unfolding Dialogues: Relational Resources for Global Good there are over 60 events offered by colleagues from around the world, all sharing their work, insights, and passions. Many sessions are offered in multiple languages and in time zones from around the world. The vitality of these meetings is dependent on supportive participants from over 35 countries, engaging, and co-creating a learning community. Owing to the pandemic these past few years, we have had to postpone the face-to-face conferences that have charged the energies of our community. Thus, huge efforts have been made to create the present Gathering, to stir the waters of creativity and care knowing that all of us are invested in making the world a better place. It is through constructionist, relational, and appreciative practices, the lifeblood of this community, that flows from our being there for each other. We hope you join in.

The registration fee is low and adjusted for global differences in economy. There are also scholarships and group rates available and no one will be turned away for lack of the fee. Invite colleagues and students who may draw nourishment from these events.

I look forward to seeing you in a few days!
